

Contents

Preface	7
Introduction Franco Marucci	9
The Aesthetics of Evil: the 'Artist-Criminal' in Victorian Literature Maurizio Ascari	17
Ruskin's Optical Thought: Tools for Mountain Representation Emma Sdegno	29
Arts of Representation: Interart Dynamics in Victorian Photography, Painting and Literature Paola Spinozzi	51
"That Picture Should Be Painted": Vernon Lee's "Oke of Okehurst" Michela Vanon Alliata	65
Introduction Loretta Innocenti	81
The Falling Rocket: Ruskin, Whistler and Abstraction in Art Clive Wilmer	87
Pictures of Modernity, the Modernity of the Picturesque: A Chiasmus Francesca Orestano	103
Writing and Moving Pictures: Conrad's Contribution Sema Postacioglu-Banon	119

"To the Lighthouse": The Remedial Function of the Visual and the Spatial Savina Stevanato	129
Disrupting Representation: from Metaphor to Metonymy in the Modernist Image Silvia Bigliazzi	149
The Painted Word: Trees and Flowers in D. H. Lawrence and Virginia Woolf Giulia Pissarello	171
Travelling with Kodak: Photography, Literature and Art Theory in the Writings of the Bloomsbury Group Elena Gualtieri	183
"Bones with a few wedding rings mixed up in their dust": Virginia Woolf's Arcadian "vanitas" Milena Romero Allué	195
Writing/Visualising World War I as A Complex Act of Representation Vita Fortunati	213
Select Bibliography	227
Illustrations	233
Notes on Contributors	247